DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 17 and 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Rudakov et al., 6,451,050.

As to claims 17 and 18, Rudakov et al. disclose an expandable support (11) from having first and second end portions, a porous polymer sleeve (12 or 13) having inner and outer surfaces, and a coating of a cell adhesion peptide (see column 2, lines 33-35) carried on and attached to at least one of the inner and outer surfaces of the polymer sleeve for enhancing endothelial cell growth on the polymer sleeve (see column 4, lines 36-43.)

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 19 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rudakov et al., 6,451,050, in view of Brown et al., 6,071,305, and further in view of Bhatnagar, 5,958,428.

Rudakov et al. disclose the invention substantially as claimed (see above), except for the cell-adhesion peptide having the amino acid sequence presented as SEQ ID NO:1. Rudakov et al. teaches an expandable stent for treatment of blood vessels, wherein the stent includes therapeutic drugs such as heparin, column 4, line 33.

Brown et al., like Rudakov et al., teaches use of an expandable stent for treatment of blood vessels, wherein the stent includes therapeutic drugs such as heparin, see column 2, lines 38-52, and column 5, line 17. Brown et al. further teaches that other therapeutic drugs include collagen, see column 5, line 26.

Bhatnagar teaches that collagen functions as a structural protein of tissues and that it is the major fibrous element in blood vessels, see column 1, lines 50-53, and that collagen participates in physiological interactions which include formation of complexes with other macro-molecules such as fibronectin and the modulation of cell proliferation, see column 2, lines 24-31. Bhatnagar further discloses that collagen appears to cause adverse reactions within the body, and thus synthetic peptides are provided that mimic the cell binding domain of collagen, see column 3, lines 21-32. Bhatnagar teaches that the synthetic peptide has the amino acid sequence as disclosed in column 3, lines 42-43, which is the same amino acid sequence as Applicant's claimed SEQ ID NO:1.

Since Brown et al. teaches use of an expandable stent incorporating the same therapeutic drugs as Rudakov, it would have been obvious to provide collagen as a therapeutic drug, as suggested by Brown et al., in the Rudakov et al. stent with the polymer sleeve. Furthermore, it would have been obvious to provide, on the Rudakov stent, the synthetic peptide disclosed by Bhatnagar, as an alternative to collagen, as would be desirable to obtain the same therapeutic effect as collagen but without the adverse effects of collagen, as taught by Bhatnagar.
